

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 20 Jul 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Sunny and hot; some thunderstorms developing for eastern England today.

Today:

Good deal of cloud affecting coastal districts in the north, whilst other areas will have a good deal of sunshine and turning hot again across central, southern and western parts. Risk of thunderstorms developing over eastern areas of England later.

Tonight:

Heavy showers and thunderstorms over east and southeast England slowly fading, then dry with clear periods, but low cloud and hill fog affecting northeast England and eastern Scotland.

Wednesday:

Another dry and sunny day for many areas, once low cloud clears back to the coast in the north-east. The high temperatures may trigger isolated heavy showers in the afternoon.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:

Hot in the west on Thursday but turning more unsettled from the south as rain, perhaps thundery, moves north Friday night into Saturday. Remaining drier and brighter in the northwest.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.